President's Message:

Hello To All !

Happy Spring to each of you ... that long awaited time of year that some feel will never arrive ... finally, is upon us. We have an exciting year ahead of us, beginning this weekend with our annual LKC Red Rose Classic Dog Show held at the Lebanon Expo Center, Sunday 05/12/2013. We always have a great time ... and this year we will have a few surprises for everyone. Our Annual Awards Banquet will be coming up in June ... hoping to see as many of you as possible. Our LKC Election will be held as always in conjunction with the Awards Banquet, all the more reason to come and have a delicious meal and applaud your fellow member's accomplishments shared with each of their very special canine partners. Our picnic in August and our RDOD in September will both be held at Amos Herr Park / Hempfield Township / 1700 Nissley Road, Landisville, Pa. More detailed information can be found on our website at www.lancasterkennelclub.org. Email reminders will be sent as we get closer to each event.

My fellow Newsletter Editors (RB Mahoney and Bradley Frisbie) and I, of course, encourage each of you to send us any information you would like to share with the club. Whether it be a special accomplishment, canine health information, delicious dog biscuit recipes, a funny pet story, etc ... everything is welcome. This is your Newsletter ... send us your ideas. Looking forward to seeing each of you in the next few months, but especially this coming weekend. We will have members there Saturday @ noon to help set up for the show on Sunday ... and then at the show itself. To me, the most important part of the show is the clean up afterwards. If you have plans for the rest of the weekend, but can spare just a couple hours @ 4:30 Sunday afternoon ... please come by and help us "finish up". It is always incredibly appreciated !! See you this weekend !!

Nominating Committee

The Nomination Committee has worked very hard selecting the following members to run for our LKC Board Of Directors; (Candace Boyd, Kim Hess, Jen Lazowski, Marsha Quinn, Carolyn Vack, Tammy Selka, Mary Lou Strayer, and Lori Wright). We have not heard back from everyone, and will announce the final candidates when we have heard from everyone. Thanks to each of these potential candidates for their past service to our club, and we, the Nominating Committee feel confident any of these members will bring a wealth of knowledge to the LKC Board Of Directors.

Respectfully,

Pete Byrne/Judy Kramarich/Dale Kramarich

From the Editors:

We are starting the perfect dog week. Our own Red Rose Classic show. Great memories for many of us, and the foundation of memories for many of our new members. It will also be a day to renew old friendships and make some new ones.

Again we are thankful for our beautiful indoor location at the Lebanon Expo Center. Some of us may prefer the outdoor shows, but there is much to be said about shade and dry dogs. Our hardworking show committee has done a great job. They have put together a fine panel of judges to showcase how our dogs conform to their individual standards.

Win or lose this is about showing off our breeding stock or a great new baby; or maybe just showcasing one of our Specials. What matters is the SPORTSMANSHIP. A congrats goes a long way; it may be what that person needs for just a bit more encouragement or to inspire them to continue.

Maybe when your breed is done, sit ringside and watch breeds from another group that you are not familiar with. Better yet, watch the Group judging. The winners have all worked hard, and maybe you will learn something about other breeds.

A huge amount of work goes into putting a show together. Take a minute and pat one of our wonderful volunteers on the back and tell them job well done. Then ask if they need a bit of help.

Remember the Founding Fifty are watching.

May your day be as wonderful as all dogs can make it.

Picnic The picnic will be held rain or shine on Sunday August 18th from 12 noon to 4 p.m. in the pavilion at Amos Herr Park, 1700 Nissley Road, Landisville. We will hold our general membership meeting as well as have people games and enjoy each other in fellowship and great food. More to follow as we get closer to the date. If you have any questions please feel free to send an email to Debby Radanovic at gr179@comcast.net.

RDOD September 15th from 11 to 4 p.m. is also being held at Amos Herr Park. in conjunction with A. Herr Park Country Fair. LKC will have a nice size area this year in the shade. We will be putting up ring gates to set up for some great demo's and room for educating the community about LKC and RDOD. This is a big undertaking Ann Byrne and Deb Radanovic would like to form a bigger committee team to come up with some ideas on what you as a club would like to see and do for the 5 hours we are there. If you would like to be on the committee with us we would love to have you. This is our Kennel Club and our community let's show off our breeds and educate on being a Responsible Dog owner. We are very excited for this new location. We would love to have 100% participation for RDOD this year so mark your calendar now. Please contact Deb if you would like to be part of the RDOD committee. Deb can be reached at gr179@comcast.net or call and leave a message @ 392-7911.

6th Annual Celtic Classic Dog Shows A Success By Ann Byrne

Since becoming treasurer three years ago, I have watched the evolution of the volunteer management team. Early on, the three clubs were each doing their own thing. This group has matured into a cohesive group with each club mustering their volunteers to work for the benefit of all of us. This is evident from the many responses each club receives from exhibitors, judges, stewards, and vendors. It is also gratifying to know that Lancaster has pulled together its resources to take advantage of the generosity of the Delaware County and York clubs to equally split the net profits from the five days even though Lancaster holds only one show!

This cluster is the single most profitable thing our club participates in and your continued support makes a world of difference to what our club can do financially – whether it is scholarships, the match show, Shop for a Cause; the Red Rose Classic; the Agility Trial; RDOD, club picnic, Christmas/Holiday party; and hopefully many other projects yet to come!

For the 2014 CCDS, the changes in positions are Lancaster's Tammy Selka will be the overall CCDS Show Coordinator and the Lancaster Kennel Club show chair; Ron Dotts of York Kennel Club will assume the treasurer position, Carol Dotts and Jeff Moore will be York's Show Chairs; and from Delaware County, Tom Nuss will be Specialty Coordinator and Grounds; Terry Nuss will be Vendor Chair; and, Kim Rimel will be DCKC Show Chair. We are still hoping someone will step forward to become the Lancaster Kennel Club Celtic Classic Show Co-Chair to relieve Tammy from some of those major responsibilities.

As I end my term as treasurer, I know this cohesive team will continue the success of the five-day show, and Lancaster will continue to greatly benefit from our participation. Thank you Lancaster Kennel Club members for your previous efforts and for your continued support of these shows! Perhaps Tammy will find a less intensive position for me to fill in next year's CCDS!

THANKS TO EVERYONE FOR HELPING LKC BECOME A FULL PARTNER IN THIS ENDEAVOR!

Your First Time as Owner Handler

Always an early morning. Even though the schedule clearly states that ring time isn't until the afternoon, you're still waking up before the sun peaks over the trees. Sometimes you wish dog shows weren't all day events. This being my first show where all the responsibility falls on me, I wanted to get a head start. I was sleepy at this time and somehow managed to find my list of things to grab before leaving for Jersey. Show lead? Check. Food, treats, bait, chairs, sunglasses, keys, so on and so on? Check. Now, wait a second. I'm in the car, engine running, GPS at the ready. Somehow I feel like I'm forgetting something. What is it? Damn it! I forgot the dog! Huff, so I run inside to see my dog sound asleep on the couch as usual.

After whisking him outside to do his business, I'm speeding to Jersey in record time. Is there really no traffic? Or am I driving so fast everyone else seems to be standing still? No time to think about that! I have to get my dog to the on site groomer before the steadily approaching ring time.

After the long drive I slowed down to turn the corner into the county park. Somehow the dog always knows when you've reached your destination because he's miraculously woken up and is impeding your reach to the steering wheel. As we approach the show grounds you can see the coloured tents from afar. By this time the windows are down and the dog's head is outside sniffing the breeze and barking at all the dogs we pass. Being an all terrier show, it was neat to see all the varieties of terriers. Big and small they were walking by the car or penned nearby. My dog was loving it.

Now, I've made it this far. Why is it so difficult finding the groomer's van? There is a sea of RV's and ladies in big hats. I can't see a thing! I hope that was a pothole I just ran over... Finally, of course it had to be all the way across the parking lot. I found the groomer's set up. The groomer also doubles as my dog's handler. But not today! I explained to the groomer, as my dog is squirming on the table, "I hope this is as fun as you make it seem." She guaranteed it was. She was even nice enough to give me some pointers in handling my dog myself. We worked mostly on the pace.

Eventually she blurts out, "Oh my god! It's five minutes until your ring time. Go!" Now I'm rushing through the crowds thinking of everything at once. Did I grab everything I needed? Well, regardless. At least I grabbed the dog this time. I needed to check. I looked down at the schedule and found that the ring is 11 and the ring time is what? Still and hour away yet?

Now with time on my hands, I feel at ease. My friends were nice enough to let me borrow a temporary lead. But I love a good Resco lead. So I found a dealer and scarfed one up real quick. In the time soon after, my dog went potty again. This was nice because the last two times he was showing, he went in the ring. We roamed the ring sides and came across my dog's breeder. I knew she would be there, so it was great to catch up. Somehow, however, she seemed more lost than I. You know breeders, always chatting and meeting with others. She didn't even know the Norwich ring or time! So, we hustled off to the ring.

Gossip. Gossip is bad to be involved with but it sure can lead to some interesting knowledge. Dirty handler? Ok, I'll watch out for her. You learn real fast the ways of the dog world. Who plays nice and who doesn't. I just smile and nod as the ring side conversation heats up. I get my handler number and before I know it, we're called. I look down at my dog to get his attention as we ready to enter the ring and I find that, for some reason, he threw up!? Why?! Well, he looked fine and perked up immediately. No turning back now. I was the only dog in the age group for Sweepstakes. Kind of nice to get warmed up I thought as I entered the ring. Right up onto the table we went. "Please hold a stack. Please hold a stack," I whispered to my dog. Before too long the judge was molesting him and even complimented his teeth. Now my moral is up. Then it was followed by an easy diagonal. "To the corner and back," the judge proclaimed. I thought to myself, how boring. A "down and back?" I was hoping to tell Gail my first walk in the real ring was a triangle or something harder! Hahaha. But Gail's handling class came in handy. I even switched lead hands on the way back. I could just imagine Gail saying, "How classy." Haha.

With no preliminary competition, we took a first, a check, and a neat looking Norwich magnet. "This is pretty fun!" I thought. The breeder was there cheering us on. After a short time, I'm back in the ring for regular classes with two professional handlers and a new judge. I felt my dog did well. I had more of his attention the second time around and held a stack on the table again! That alone made me happy. Haha. 3rd place is a ribbon. You can't win them all. "We'll get there soon," I whispered to my dog. Ahh, the relief of being done. Fun, but nerve wracking to an extent. And I thought I had nerves of steel after graduating Police Academy...? Hahaha.

When I walked back to the tent I exchanged a nice conversation with some handlers including Andrew Green, son of Peter Green. He's like a wise sage. Always has great tips or interesting conversation. I felt like one of them. I love meeting new people and learning new things. Even if it comes with drama or gossip. Haha.

Eventually I walked back to my car and was approached three separate times by people I didn't even know. Each of them saying the same thing. They asked if I was the dog's handler or an owner handler. I said I was owner/handler. It was nice to receive their compliment that they thought we walked "perfectly" together. The one even said, "I wouldn't have known you from a professional handler. You were that good." A nice few compliments to end the day with.

And a long day it was. Hours later I returned home with a dog that was sleepier than my 90 year old grandpa. Meeting new people, applying Gail's teaching, handling my own dog? Yes, what a fun day it was. I hope my professional handler I hire won't be upset when I tell her, "Sorry. I'd like to handle my dog for a while. That was too much fun to stop now." Hahaha.

Submitted by: Deborah L. Bush - Secretary

- Treasurer's Report: - The Treasurer reports will continue to be in the Members Only area.

AKC Delegate's Report: Carolyn Vack

There were two recent announcements from AKC. Rally events are now considered separate events and are no longer tied to obedience. Also the 100 mile agility trial regulation was lifted. Clubs may have agility trials on the same day within a 100 mile distance as long as they get the approval of the club who held the date first.

I don't think I have anything else to add. See you at the show!
Carolyn

Some Thoughts on Glucosamine and Chondroitin and Pet Food

As of late, many pet food manufacturers have chosen to include glucosamine and chondroitin in their commercial food preparations. While many may think this an altruistic move on the part of these manufacturers, the decision to include these ingredients has much more to do with increasing product sales and product/brand differentiation than most companies would care to admit. Focus groups, following trends in the human food and nutraceutical category, and the difficulty of marketing parity products have all played a much more significant role than the desire to save the world from canine arthritis. Make no mistake, the pet food industry is big business and, as such, is motivated by the bottom line, profit margins, and just plain making a buck - something clearly demonstrated last year by the Pet Food Recall and the use of inferior foreign ingredients in attempt to keep costs as low as possible to increase their ROI (return on investment).

Contrary to what many believe, there have been several studies completed on the efficacy of Glucosamine and Chondroitin given various types of administration - orally as a supplement, as a treat standardized as to dosage, and as additive to pet food. The best overall methodology is seen in the study conducted by Tiffany Linn Bierer and Linh M.Nui which was published in The America Society for Nutritional Sciences in June 2002 and is entitled "Improvement of Arthritic Signs in Dogs Fed Green-Lipped Mussel (Perna canaliculus)."

Now I know you are thinking "Green Lipped Mussels? What the heck do they have to do with glucosamine and chondroitin?" The answer is ... everything! These very large (by mussel standards!) New Zealand bi-valve mollusks are one of the richest sources of naturally occurring Glycosaminoglycans (GAGS) which are, in turn, a major component of joint cartilage.. Glucosamine, an amino sugar, is a precursor for Glycosaminoglycans. Chondroitin is actually a variable chain of alternating sugars and a true GAG along with things like Dermatan and Heparin. Ok, so back to the study ...

Bierer and Nui used a total of 90 dogs divided as follows:

Study 1 - Green Lipped Mussel used as a supplement and in addition to regular dog food as dosed by weight. For this portion of the Study, 15 dogs were in the Control Group and 17 received Supplementation.

Study 2 - Green Lipped Mussel incorporated in a semi-moist treat and given in addition to regular dog food again by weight. This portion of the Study consisted of 16 dogs in the Control Group and 17 the receiving the treat.

Study 3 - This group was fed the regular dog food formulation used with the other two groups with the addition of Green Lipped Mussel added during the manufacturing process with a final inclusion level of .3%. The Control Group consisted of 17 dogs while 14 received the Green Lipped Mussel as manufactured component of their main meal in accord with standard feeding practices in respect to maintenance of over-all condition. (Actually, WALTHAM® Veterinary Diet Canine Joint Support - a prescriptive - was used.) All dogs in the study were followed for 6 weeks. The results were as follows:

Study 1 - 83% (14 of the 17 dogs) receiving Green Lipped Mussel as a supplement dosed by weight and in addition to regular dog food saw a 30% or better reduction in total arthritic scores. Three dogs actually saw a 70% improvement.

Study 2 - 53% (9 of 17 dogs) receiving the semi-moist treat saw a 30% or better reduction in total arthritic scores.

Study 3 - 50% (7 of 14 dogs) receiving Green Lipped Mussel as part of their daily processed diet saw a 30% or better reduction in total arthritic scores.

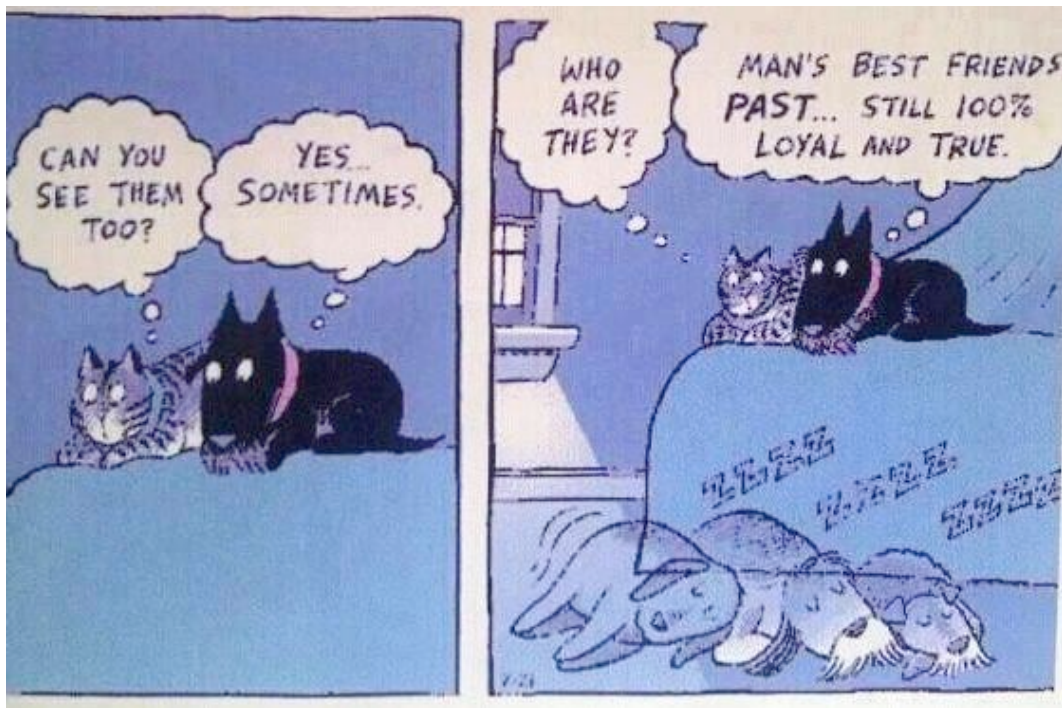

NOTE: The full study can be seen at <http://jn.nutrition.org/cgi/content/full/132/6/1634S>.

The Bierer and Nui Study clearly indicates that the most efficient and effective means of dosing is by weight and in supplement form. But it also raises a not so obvious consideration. As a standardized prescriptive diet was used to judge efficacy of Green Lipped Muscle inclusion in the main meal, can we conclude that commercially available diets containing GAGS, though less effective than supplementation, will be equally as effective as the prescriptive? The answer, of course, is no - and this due to the fact that there is no overseeing authority to hold the commercial pet food companies to a standardized inclusion level of novel pet food ingredients. With the prescriptives there is oversight - albeit mostly provider driven.

While not mentioned in this Study, but also of concern, are the potential side effects of using Glucosamine and Chondroitin as a pet food additive. Derived from shell fish, it can exacerbate allergic reactions in those dogs that have sensitivities. Further, because Glucosamine is an amino sugar, it can cause fluctuations in insulin levels and thus become create problems in dogs with diabetes. A real possibility when used as a main food additive is over-dosing as in the case where, due to activity level, an individual animal requires much more in food to maintain condition than is stated in the "Feeding Guidelines" which are typically broken down into weight, rather than activity, levels. The symptoms of over dosage are soft stool, diarrhea, and vomiting. Further, as there have been no studies in either man or beast, Glucosamine and Chondroitin should not be given to the in-whelp or lactating bitch.

The conclusion? Supplement with Glucosamine and Chondroitin if you like but, given the possible side effects, do it with your veterinarian's knowledge. Don't waste your money on pet foods that use it as an additive - even the prescriptives are only effective half of the time! Above all else, use your common sense when purchasing pet food!

A man wrote a letter to a small hotel in a Midwest town he planned to visit on his vacation.

He wrote: I would very much like to bring my dog with me.

He is well-groomed

And very well behaved.

Would you be willing to permit me to keep him in my room with me at night?"

An immediate reply came from the hotel owner, who wrote:

SIR: "I've been operating this hotel for many years. In all that time, I've never had a dog steal towels, bedclothes, silverware or pictures off the walls.

I've never had to evict a dog in the middle of the night for being drunk and disorderly.

And I've never had a dog run out on a hotel bill.

Yes, indeed, your dog is welcome at my hotel.

And, if your dog will vouch for you, you're welcome to stay here, too."
